M E S S A G E

The economic development of a country largely depends on the progress of its agriculture, industry, trade and service sector. The economic output from these sectors is contributed by none other than the labourers who work in agriculture fields, mines, factories and commercial establishments. It is their hardwork and toil on which rests the prosperity and power of our nation.

On the occasion of May Day, let us dedicate ourselves to appreciate the dignity of labour and call upon the youth of the country to become skilled work force in whatever field they may chose or desire to contribute.
